BAY ST. LOUIS, MISS.

D'IBERVILLE WAS FIRST TOURIST TO GULF COAST

Carried the Proud Banners of France to the Shores of the Back Bay in 1699—Coast Has Interesting History—How and Why Islands Were Named.

BY EDGAR S. WILSON.

More and more Mississippians are seeking information about the Mississippi coast, which is destined to become the Mecca of America. I recently paid a visit to Biloxi, the oldest town in Mississippi, has become a modern city, largely due to the able and progressive administration of Honorable John J. Kennedy, and his fellow commissioners, working in loyal co-operation with the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce of which Anthony V. Ragusa is the accomplished and vigilant secretary, and to whom I am indebted for valuable information and courtesies.

The first tourist to visit Biloxi, popular resort on the Mississippi Gulf Coast was d'Iberville, gallant explorer who carried the proud banners of France to the shores of the Back Bay in the year of 1699. Here d'Iberville planted the first capital of the vast Louisiana territory stretching from the Gulf to Canada. This mighty body of land being first governed by Biloxi gives the Coast city the claim to one of the oldest places in the United States.

Seven flags have flown over Biloxi—the French, Spanish, English, Confederate, Mississippi State, Mississippi Magnolia, and the United States. Much of the old city is to be found today. A boulder marks the spot where the French landed and is located along with a cross at the north end of the d'Iberville bridge, the new concrete bridge, over Back Bay. Biloxi was the capital of the Louisiana territory before New Orleans or Mobile were founded.

D'Iberville first met the Biloxi tribe of Indians upon his arrival. Even though way down on the Gulf of Mexico, the Biloxi Indians were members of the famous Sioux family and according to the Smithsonian Institute of the National Museum of Washington, D. C., Biloxi signified in the Indian language, "The First People." The Biloxi Indians left many beautiful legends and fables, a number of which correspond with the fables accredited to Aesop.

The various islands in the Mississippi Sound off Biloxi were named by d'Iberville and his men immediately upon their discovery. Ship Island was so called because to the French it appeared as a safe harbor for vessels and they named it "Isle aux Vesseaux." Horn Island appeared to them in the shape of a horn and was thus named. The same applied to the round island of "Isle aux Rondes."

When the French saw Cat Island they were amazed at the large number of racoons running along its shores. As the racoon is strictly an American animal, it appeared to the French as a cat, the explorers called the island "Isle aux Chat." Petit Bois Island still carries the original name, meaning little or small woods. Deer Island, just off Biloxi's mainland carries a name given by the Indians. The story is told that several hundred years ago, Deer Island was so close to the mainland that deer and other animals, when hunted by the Indians would jump across from the mainland and take refuge there. This was carried from generation to generation among the Indians and was told to Chevalier Delaune, an ancestor of the present Biloxi families by the last Indian chief.

Biloxi and Mississippi played their part in the war of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States. The British fleet, under the command of General Pakenham, was anchored at Ship Island preparatory to their attempt to take New Orleans, in which the English were defeated by General Andrew Jackson in the famous "Battle of New Orleans." Picket boats from the British man-o-war ships landed at points along the coast and killed cattle for their troops aboard the transports.

The war between the states was felt too in that section. Two historic monuments mark this period at Biloxi. On West Beach boulevard is located the Jefferson Davis Soldiers' Home where the only president of the confederacy spent his last days. This home and estate, known as Beauvoir, is now admirably operated with its numerous buildings as a Confederate Soldiers' Home by the state of Mississippi. Mrs. Helen Moseby Tarrt being the justly popular superintendent.

Fort Massachusetts on Ship Island directly off Biloxi was erected by the Union army and navy during the Civil war. Some years before this conflict, the foundation for the fort was started as a matter of national defense, but the work was never completed. All of the brick and material used were brought from the East. The name "Massachusetts" was given to the fort in honor of the first federal warship to land there which carried that name. Ship Island became an important base for thousands of troops and federal operations of the troops that were there.

The lighthouse on Biloxi West Beach boulevard, over 75 years old, is another of the city's attractions. It was erected when Biloxi was a small fishing village and today appears to be as new as when built. For over sixty years the lighthouse has been in charge of women keepers and is still today under the guidance of a woman. Old residents state that when President Lincoln was assassinated the lighthouse was painted black to honor his memory and remained that way for some time before it was again painted its regulation color of white. However, the lighthouse has a rival today for the honor of guiding vessels into the Biloxi harbor in the form of thousands of electric lights along the beach front.

The old house on Porter avenue, said to have been built by early French explorers, is quite a historical spot. The walls are made of moss and clay. This is reported to be the oldest house in the Mississippi valley. And while Biloxi glows in history as

BAY ST. LOUIS REPRESENTED AT RED CROSS MEET

Inspiring Meeting Recently
Held at Hattiesburg in Interest of Cause.

A Red Cross conference was held in Hattiesburg on Thursday, Oct. 13. Miss Iolanthe Mauffray attended in the interest of Hancock county and reported a most inspiring meeting.

Mr. A. L. Schafer, assistant director of the Junior Red Cross, gave an interesting account of their activities. Enrolled under the motto, "We Serve," they are readily adapting themselves to the principles of life saving and first aid.

Another phase of their work is an international correspondence which reaches the farthest corners of the earth, thus promoting international friendliness and understanding.

Mrs. Margaret Butler, field representative, gave an annual report of field activities in Mississippi.

Mr. L. O. Crosby, who is in charge of relief and rehabilitation in Mississippi's devastated area, told a vivid story of the havoc and destruction following in the wake of the flood. Mr. James L. Tieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, briefly outlined every phase of the organization's activities, and summarized the main accomplishments of the Red Cross in our State during this year.

South Is Best For Dairying Says Former Gov. Lowden

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 19.—The South has "peculiar facilities" for the dairy industry, Former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, said today on his arrival in Memphis to speak tomorrow at a luncheon for officials of the National Dairy Show, the Tri-State Fair, Association and representatives of various Southern railroads.

"The basis for successful dairying in the North lies in legume hay and corn silage, and you can raise just as good here as we can in the North. In addition, green feed is available throughout the greater part of the year, whereas in the North it lasts a maximum of five months. Milk is produced cheaper from pasture than from any other source, he pointed out.

One of the best forms of concentrated feed is cottonseed meal, Mr. Lowden said, pointing out that this can be had cheaper in the South than elsewhere.

"You have all these advantages. Aside from that, your mild climate dispenses with the need for expensive barns. Ever since I've been farming in the South, which is eighteen years, I have advocated extension of dairying, particularly for upland farms, and am glad to note the awakened interest in dairying in the last few years. There is no reason why the South does not produce enough dairy products for its own needs, although it does not do it now."

Mr. Lowden has a 1,500 acre farm in Illinois and about 8,500 acres in Arkansas.

The former governor emphatically declined to discuss politics.

Advertising Warren County.

Warren county is to spend $20,000 on advertising. Supervisors Tom Mackey and George Hogaboom, and T. W. McCoy and Geo. R. Hackett, the latter two prominent local bankers, have been named on the committee to arrange the expenditure. The four will name a fifth member later.

The expenditure is well-advised. It will be well to remember the statement of John Wannamaker, who made millions through advertising, who always believed in publicity. Wannamaker declared that the effect of advertising, continued advertising, was a steadily-growing pull—not a jerk after one advertisement.

Do not expect immediate and concrete results from the first advertising. Continue to advertise and follow up the advertising, and results will be forthcoming.

The Post thinks the expenditure is a wise one, and the committee thus far chosen, a very good one.—Vicksburg Post.

Many Women Notaries.

Business concerns all over the State, both incorporated and unincorporated, continue to recognize the convenience and advantage of having connected with their establishments a Notary Public in order that they may have some one convenient to take acknowledgements, depositions, administer oaths, and to do such other legal acts as the statutes provide. Therefore, the applications for appointment by Governor Dennis Murphy continue to pour into the office of Secretary of State Walker Wood for notarial commissions. The number of Notaries for a county are not limited under the law, and the one requisite is that an applicant for a commission must be a qualified elector of the county for and in which he seeks a commission.

A canvass of the applications that reach Secretary Wood's office reveals the fact that a large per cent of the applicants for these commissions are women, the position of Notary being one that a lady can easily fill. Thirty-four commissions were issued during the past month.

far back as two hundred years ago, another type is being made today in the rapid development of the city as a leading resort. Much money has been spent in city and county improvements, new hotels, new buildings, apartments, etc., Biloxi's industrial and agriculture resources also face a bright future.

CITY ECHOES.

Tuesday, All Saints' Day. Advertisement for chrysanthemums will be found elsewhere in these columns.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Gex, Jr., motored to Gulfport Wednesday where they visited the Mississippi Gulf Coast fair.

Don't forget King's Daughters card benefit, at Weston hotel Saturday night. Support of the public is earnestly solicited.

Mrs. James Cluverius and son, Mr. M. Cluverius, have closed their summer home on the beach front, and returned to New Orleans this week where they will spend the winter.

Mr. John Rester, one of Hancock county's most substantial citizens, passed through Bay St. Louis Wednesday morning en route to the Gulf Coast fair at Gulfport, traveling by auto.

Opportunities abound in the classified column. Read and profit. Advertisers will find this an effective and economical means of exchanging values; procuring hired help, renting or selling property.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Wentworth and sons, Rupert, Cecil and Lloyd, of Hattiesburg, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hart. Another son, Edward C. Wentworth, is a student at S. C. C. this session.

Mr. John Curtis, of Piquette, has moved to Bay St. Louis and taken the Pan-Am Gas distribution and sales agency in charge, and now making this city his home. A former resident, we note his return with interest.

Both Bay St. Louis banks will be closed half day on All Saints'—next Tuesday. Mayor Blaize has issued a proclamation accordingly. The afternoon will be exclusively to revere the memory of dead and to decorate their last resting places.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gex left Friday morning by auto for Jackson, where they visited the annual Mississippi State Fair and were guests of friends. The long trip to and fro was made in Mr. Gex's new family auto and was most delightful from every angle.

A number of visitors from Bay St. Louis visited the community fairs last week, respectively, at Flat Top, Kilm and Sellers and each place the most creditable exhibits in domestic science, agricultural products, school work and public health activity, the latter in charge of Dr. C. M. Shipp, Miss O'Dom at each place secured hearty co-operation and best of results. Each exhibit showed our people are alive to our opportunities and possibilities, and visitors to the different communities were amply repaid for their time and interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Avery, recently left their home at Detroit, Michigan, en route to spend the winter at Bay St. Louis, as per annual custom, and are spending a while at San Antonio, Texas. They are located at 831 West French Place.

Mrs. Eldridge returned to her home at Abbeville, La., Saturday after a ten-day visit to her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Gex, Jr., at their attractive home in Court street, and who have been recipients of a number of social attentions since their return home from Canada and the East.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. O. Mauffray have returned from New Orleans where they visited their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Funston Mauffray, on the occasion of the birthday—first anniversary of their granddaughter, which occurred Sunday, October 15, 1927.

Mr. George R. Rea returns home tomorrow from Houston, Texas, where he attended the National Bankers' Association, representing the Merchants Bank and Trust Company, of which he is president. While away and in Texas, he took occasion to visit a brother at Longview and transacted business at Dallas.

Recently purchasing a beautiful home in Pritchard Place, Mr. and Mrs. C. Greer Moore and children moved to New Orleans this week, in which city they will spend the winter. Mr. Moore retaining his office in Bay St. Louis, will commute daily, and continue his local real estate business as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Wisner returned home Monday from their visit to friends at Memphis, Tenn., and visit to the Tri-State Fair, which Mr. Wisner said was well worthy of a visit, especially the National Dairy Show, of so much interest to Mississippi and Mississippians just now. It is apparent the dairy cow is going to solve the problem what to do with our cut-over lands. South Mississippi is especially adapted for the purpose.

A message from Okolona, Miss., conveys the glad news telling of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Clem W. Weston, of Bay St. Louis and Logtown, and that both mother and child are doing well. This announcement will be received with interest by a large circle of friends over the State.

Miss Iolanthe Mauffray recently returned from Hattiesburg, where she attended a regional meeting of the Red Cross organization, reporting the conference one of interest and benefit. The Echo notes Bay St. Louis and Hancock county were represented at so important gathering.

Patrons of the A. & G. theater enjoy the super features of Sunday and Monday nights, films of unusual class and character. No bigger feature than "Les Miserables" is now occupying the screen, and the announcement of the coming of this feature Sunday should be of more than ordinary interest. Such enterprise justifies a liberal patronage.

Contractor Richard McCarthy, represented by his son, Richard McCarthy, Jr., is progressing rapidly with the rebuilding of the north wall of the A. & G. Theater, recently damaged by fire, to the extent only the interior work remains to be done. It is considered by knowing ones a fine piece of work and was constructed in a comparative short time.

Members of the Roxana Oil Company, to drill for oil in the Pearl river section of Hancock county, arrived Monday afternoon, registered at the Weston hotel, where they will make headquarters. The force comes to make a preliminary survey and to make seismic shooting. Representing entirely different interests, members of another force recently at work in the Jordan river section of the county are now operating in Pearl river county. This work is done preliminary to drilling, and no results are given out for publication.

King's Daughters of Bay St. Louis announce a benefit card party at Hotel Weston Saturday night, to which the public is cordially invited. The cause represented by the King's Daughters is self-appealing and little further needs to be said. However, we would respectfully urge a liberal response, as we feel sure will be made. Don't forget the date and place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Craig, residing in Second street, are receiving the congratulations of their friends and acquaintances on the occasion of the advent of a daughter at their home, which happy event occurred during the early part of the week. Mr. Craig is representing the Mississippi Highway Commission in capacity of engineer constructing the Bay St. Louis bridge.

With double attraction on other side of the bay today—Friday—country fair at Gulfport and Sells-Floto circus at Biloxi, a considerable percentage of the local population will be found out of town. Today will be school day at the fair. Bay St. Louis Day, Tuesday, did not find a half dozen of visitors from this city. Failure to advertise locally was the cause.

The Echo expresses the hope the stock law will be most rigidly enforced, regardless of its ends, and regardless of what the cost may be we hope and feel satisfied it will be enforced to the very letter. This law was enacted by the legislature for the good of Mississippi, after careful deliberation, and is the result of wisdom from men of vision. The stock law has been a thorn in the side for all times. We welcome the law and will urge its rigid enforcement.

SO IT GOES

"Gosh, not me. I meet them wherever I turn."

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

Miss V. Gex was hostess Monday afternoon to a most delightful afternoon bridge party at the family home of her mother, Mrs. M. V. Gex, 20 North Front street, to which the following-named were present:

Mrs. J. C. Buckley, Mrs. Wm. Moore, Mrs. Nesbit, Mrs. Earl Russell, Mrs. Sidney W. Prague, Mrs. H. E. Keroson, Mrs. George E. Pitcher, Mrs. (Capt.) Smith, Mrs. S. F. Gentry, Mrs. C. G. Moreau, Mrs. Roger M. Boh, Mrs. R. W. Mitchell, Mrs. John D. Grace, Misses Virginia Grace, Ethel de Armas.

Mrs. Gex was assisted by Mrs. R. L. Genin, Mrs. J. Mayot.

Mrs. Wm. A. Staehle was hostess Wednesday afternoon to a luncheon-bridge party at her handsome new home on the beach front, and St. Charles street, and was one of the interesting and beautiful affairs of the week. This charming party fitting to the beautiful home and the first to take place within its walls, only recently completed.

Mrs. Staehle's guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Winfield Perdue and her house guest, Mrs. C. C. Ridenhour, of Mobile; Mrs. E. de Montulzin, Mrs. J. D. Grace, Mrs. George E. Pitcher, Mrs. Kenneth Peppercorne, Mrs. Louis Spurl, of New Orleans; Mrs. E. J. Leonard, Mrs. Chas. G. Moore, Mrs. E. W. Dracett, Mrs. Leo W. Seal, Mrs. (Dr.) Alvin P. Smith, Mrs. Roger M. Boh, Mrs. Frank Jaden, Mrs. G. E. Ferchauld, Mrs. Cain, of Waveland; Mrs. S. A. Power, Mrs. J. A. Green, Misses Elsa and Hilda Spurl, Margaret Green, Miss Edwards.

Mrs. Staehle is one of the charming young hostesses and her beautiful home will from time to time be the scene of social entertainment.

An event of interest and pleasure was Ladies' Night entertainment, given as an All Hallows' evening celebration, at the Hotel Weston Wednesday night by Bay St. Louis Rotary club, and commanded the social attention of some eighty-odd participants. It was a typical Rotary success, and in addition to the dinner, the number of entertainment features presented from time to time, quite clever. Rev. Father Spengler, of Gulfport, a Rotarian, was the speaker of the evening.

Decorative were artistic and effective and the motif fully in keeping with the All Hallows' season.

WHERE MEN ARE 'LOST' TO WORLD

love of man for man. From the trials and troubles of these men I learned that even in prison there is a relatively; that is if you look about you, you don't feel like crying too much over your own sorrows.

The walls are forty feet high at Atlanta and are of gray stone. Why did Gerald Chapman take such a hold on the men of the prison? It was not because they were lawbreakers in the sense of defeating prison discipline, but because Chapman was emblematic of escape from hell itself. And by that I do not mean that cruelties or anything of that sort are practiced by the prison authorities. They are as kind as the law permits; it is the taking away of man's liberty that seems so grave a thing.

The Volstead Violators.

No matter what the thing involved, I wonder if God meant to take liberty away from man without the most painstaking analysis? Men are human, and judges are human, and I fear it is human for some man who has done a little that is wrong to be deprived of liberty that is too great. My study of the rate of increase in prisoners in Atlanta leads me to believe that many liquor violations that can't be as hard as other crimes bring men to prison who really should not be given such drastic treatment.

There were about 16,000 prisoners in twenty years before prohibition and in the next four years there were 3,000. The moonshiner who used to be hunted in the mountains now has turned bootlegger. Where he used to ply his work among people of humble sort, now he is patronized by the wealthy men who themselves are sent to no such life as is the man who peddles his wares.

Suffers an Eternity.

While my heart is full for the men I left back there, I must confess that my brain is not big enough to suggest the answer. I realize fully that we must obey the law and that society must be protected, but, in protecting itself, must it kill the souls of men, damning them forever? I pledge you that for one day of that life in prison, a man suffers an eternity. After a time, the men become hardened to it but are not cured.

So many stories—human souls laid bare! All the stage which I have studied from its many sides, the romantic or the realistic, never has revealed to me a tenth of what I saw and studied and shrunk from when I was in that prison.

One man, a number now and not a name, was the cleverest train robber of a generation. He is doing time on another charge, something rather ironically less than train robbery, and if the story of that man could be told, it would prove a most interesting analysis of criminal methods. He had a system for silk robberies that extended clear from the Atlantic seaboard into Japan. One time a whole carload of silk disappeared, yet the car itself appeared in the east, all jury sealed and regular, except the silk had vanished.

Gave Him Presents.

When I left, I think the boys showed that they regarded me as a person not all bad. They gave me every sort of gift ranging from a bakelite desk set, turned out by hand in lathe, so a beaded bag. Yet, there is no jealousy of the man who is going. They are sorry to lose you, but they are glad that you are going back to try to remake yourself.

When I look back and think of things I didn't do because I would shudder. Time! Why, in prison that's what you have most of. And for me, I am going to try to get the sweeter things of life, for now I know that this is time—time even out of prison, but that it is the right sort of time.

Safe Argument.

"Are you in favor of daylight saving?"
"It has its advantages," answered Senator Sorghum. "It gives people something to argue about, that involves no possible mutual insinuations as to moral character."—Washington Star.
